Words from our Chaplin

– Eric Smith

What a year we have had – a world-wide pandemic, killer hornets, protests and riots across America, and then dust from Africa. I am almost afraid to ask, “What could be next.” If I do, God in His infinite wisdom may just sit His glass of sweet tea down and say, “Watch this.” But seriously, times are rough right now. Everything points to a quick return of our Savior, but we still don’t know the day or the hour. Since we don’t know when He will return, we have to be ready. Ready to go when he comes back for us. When He does return, we won’t have time to say, “Hold on a minute Jesus, I need to get ready to go.” No. When He returns we have to be ready. So the question I am going to ask is are you ready? Are your ready for our Savior’s return. Are you ready to spend an eternity with Him? I don’t mean did you say a prayer as a kid and get baptized; but are you truly living as His disciple ready for His return. If not, I would challenge you to get ready. I would love to talk with you about being ready if you want. Love ya’ll - Eric

Words from our President- Dan Jones
July 2020

Rebecca read a quip to me from the internet, probably Facebook, that said, "I'm wondering when the good luck from eating black-eyed peas on New Year's Day is going to kick in?" I had to laugh at least a little. Just about the time it seemed that at least a few things were heading toward normal, here it comes again! Information about Covid-19 numbers going up, and closing businesses again, reducing the capacity percentage in restaurants, requesting or requiring that people wear masks, and so on. Add to that the protests and riots going on seemingly everywhere. It seems to me that this year has been the most unusual, or maybe non-usual, year of my life. One bright spot we don't hear much about from major news sources is that the mortality rate has gone down, fewer people are actually dying from the virus. Not sure why that isn't generally making the news.

And then I ask myself "What can I do to make a difference?" I have been sorely tempted to respond to numerous entries on Facebook, or to a comment thread online, but after giving it just a little bit of thought, I think people don't really want to listen to reason or discuss or even debate the issues, they just want to have things their way, so I have thus far remained silent as far as the online community is concerned.

After reflecting on the whole picture, I still come up with only one answer; Jesus. People need Jesus. He can and will make the difference. Looking at all that's going on, I can also say this is a God-sized issue. Only He can really make the necessary difference. So, when we go out to minister, we must go in the power and grace of the Holy Spirit for any good to come of it. To do this we must pray and hear Him. He can and will give us the right words to say at just the right time.

Jesus matters.
